PROGRESS UNDER THE UNITED STATES WAREHOUSE ACT.

The United States warehouse act became a law August 11, 1916. The prime purpose of the act is to develop a form of warehouse receipt covering the storage of cotton, grain, wool, tobacco, and flaxseed, which will be readily and widely negotiable as collateral for loan purposes. The act provides for a system of licensing and bonding warehousemen under conditions which will tend to insure the integrity of the receipts issued by such warehousemen.

The first three and one-half years following the passage of the act were devoted largely toward carrying on educational campaigns among warehousemen, bankers, and producers, with a view to acquainting them with the merits of the act, and to drafting rules and regulations for the operation of the different kinds of warehouses included under the act. That little progress was made in the way of actually licensing warehouses is evidenced by the fact that by April 1, 1920, there were licensed only 23 cotton warehouses, with a combined storage capacity of 40,050 bales of cotton, and 5 grain warehouses, with a total capacity of 136,000 bushels. During the year immediately following, fair progress was made in the licensing of warehousemen. On April 1, 1921, there were licensed 238 cotton warehouses, with a combined storage capacity of 429,975 bales of cotton, and 56 grain warehouses, with a total capacity of 2,108,400 bushels. That year also marked substantial progress in the way of licensing wool warehousemen, not so much, however, in the number of warehousemen as in the storage capacity of the warehouses covered by the licenses issued. During the year from April 1, 1920, to April 1, 1921, 5 wool warehousemen were licensed, operating storage capacity to accommodate 97,500 bags of wool, or approximately 24,375,000 pounds.

During the period from April 1, 1921, to May 1, 1922, substantial progress in the licensing of public cotton warehousemen was made, not so much in the licensing of increased numbers of warehousemen, but in the fact that during this period a great many warehousemen operating warehouses of large storage capacity came under the system. For the first time grain warehousemen operating a chain of elevators availed themselves of the benefits of the act.

It was during this period that cotton warehousemen operating warehouses ranging from 10,000 to as much as 75,000 bales capacity became licensed. Many of these warehouses are in the production areas, so that the producers are given an incentive to store their cotton in public warehouses, because there is placed at their disposal a warehouse receipt which is fast becoming recognized among bankers generally as one of the best forms of collateral for loan purposes. It was also during the past year that the first public cotton warehouseman in the New England States was licensed under the act. This warehouse has licensed capacity for 30,000 bales of compressed cotton. It was during this same period that one warehouseman operating a chain of 25 cotton warehouses, ranging in capacity from 5,000 to 75,000 bales, all of which are located in the cotton-producing areas of Tennessee, Arkansas, Mississippi, and Louisiana, placed his entire chain of warehouses under the Federal statute. During this period large cotton warehouses at ports such as Galveston, Houston, Mobile, and New Orleans were placed under the act.

In this same year one grain warehouseman operating a chain of nine elevators in Colorado filed applications. Another grain warehouseman operating a chain of 64 elevators in Oregon, Washington, and Idaho filed applications and 118 applications were received from another grain warehouseman operating in that same area. These warehouses were all licensed.

During this period, from April 1, 1921, to May 1, 1922, the beginning was made in the licensing of tobacco warehouses, and by the latter date there were 14 tobacco warehousemen licensed.

A more effective presentation of the progress made in licensing warehouses in the past two years is shown in the following table:

Kind of warehouse.	To April 1, 1920.		April 1, 1921.		May 1, 1922.
	Num-ber.	Capacity.	Num-ber.	Capacity.	Num-ber.	Capacity.
Cotton.....	23	40,050 bales....	238	429,975 bales.....	268	1,209,695 bales.
Grain.....	5	136,000 bushels	56	2,108,400 bushels.	263	14,441,080 bushels.
Wool.....			5	24,375,000 pounds	18	27,500,000 pounds.
Tobacco.....					14	68,395,000 pounds.

In this table it will be seen that the licensed cotton capacity on May 1, 1922, is almost three times that of April 1, 1921, and the licensed grain capacity is almost seven times that of April 1, 1921. It is also seen that while the licensed capacity for the storage of cotton is three times that of the year previous, the number of licensed warehousemen has increased by but 30. The increase is attributable to the fact that during the year a number of warehousemen operating warehouses of large capacity became licensed.

The following table shows the number of cotton warehouses with capacities of 5,000 bales or more licensed under the act as of May 1, 1922:

Number of warehouses.	Capacity in bales.	Number of warehouses.	Capacity in bales.	Number of warehouses.	Capacity in bales.	Number of warehouses.	Capacity in bales.
14	5,000	11	10,000	5	15,000	2	25,000
7	6,000	1	10,500	1	18,000	4	30,000
3	7,000	1	11,000	1	18,500	1	40,000
1	7,500	1	11,500	1	19,000	1	52,000
3	8,000	1	12,000	2	20,000	1	75,000
1	9,000	4	14,000	2	22,000

The progress which has been made in the past year in licensing cotton, grain, and tobacco warehouses is due in a large measure to three influences: First, a more general and a keener appreciation on the part of bankers of the value of a warehouse receipt issued under the United States warehouse act; second, the activity of producers' cooperative associations; and, third, the recognition of Federal warehouse receipts accorded by the War Finance Corporation. Some of the growers' cooperative associations have refused to store any of their products with warehousemen who were not operating under the Federal statute. All cotton warehouses used by the Long Staple Cotton Growers Cooperative Association of Mississippi are licensed under the act and the Burley Tobacco Growers Association, operating in Kentucky, Indiana, Ohio, and West Virginia, is also placing all warehouses under its control under the act.

AMENDMENTS AND ADDITIONS TO WAREHOUSE REGULATIONS.

On June 16, 1921, the following general regulation applicable to all regulations promulgated under the act was promulgated by the Secretary of Agriculture:

GENERAL REGULATIONS UNDER THE UNITED STATES WAREHOUSE ACT.

REGULATION 1—Combination warehouses.

SECTION 1. A license may be issued for the storage of two or more agricultural products in a single warehouse. Where such a license is desired, a single application, inspection, bond, record, report or other paper, document or proceeding relating to such warehouse, shall be sufficient unless otherwise directed by the Chief of the Bureau of Markets.

SECTION 2. Where such license is desired, the amount of the bond, net assets, and inspection and license fees shall be determined by the Chief of the Bureau of Markets in accordance with the regulations applicable to the particular agricultural product which would require the largest bond and the greatest amount of net assets and of fees if the full capacity of the warehouse were used for its storage.

On July 18, 1921, the following amendments were made to the regulations for grain warehouses by the Secretary of Agriculture dated September 9, 1919:

Amend regulation 4, section 1, paragraph 5, by adding the following thereto:

except when requested by the depositor of other than fungible grain, a receipt omitting statement of grade may be issued unless otherwise required by the law of the State in which the warehouse is located.

Amend regulation 4, section 5, subdivision (b) to read as follows:

(b) have plainly placed upon the face of the receipt a statement showing the date of delivery, the kind of grain, the grade, if determined, and the weight thereof delivered, and such statement shall either be signed by the person lawfully entitled to such delivery, or his authorized agent, or the warehouseman shall obtain from such person a separate written acknowledgment of the delivery.

Amend regulation 5, section 21, paragraph 2, subdivision (b) to read as follows:

(b) the quantity, the kind, and the grade, if determined, of the grain, at the time the notice is given.

On the 13th day of December, 1921, regulation 2, section 4, of the regulations of the Secretary of Agriculture, dated September 9, 1919, for grain warehouses was amended to read as follows:

The warehouseman, conducting a warehouse for which application for license has been made, shall have and maintain, above all exemptions and liabilities, unencumbered assets liable for the payment of any indebtedness arising from the conduct of the warehouse, to the extent of at least 10 cents per bushel of its grain storage capacity, determined in accordance with paragraph 1 of section 2 of regulation 3, except that the amount of such assets need not be more than $100,000. In case such warehouseman has applied for licenses to conduct two or more warehouses in the same State, the assets applicable to all of which shall be subject to the liabilities of each, such warehouses shall be deemed to be one warehouse for the purposes of the assets required under this section, and such warehouseman shall have and maintain, above all exemptions and liabilities, unencumbered assets liable for the payment of any indebtedness arising from the conduct of any of such warehouses, to the extent of at least ten cents per bushel of their aggregate grain storage capacity, determined in accordance with paragraph 1 of section 2 of regulation 3, except that the amount of such assets need not be more than $100,000. For the purposes of this paragraph only, capital stock, as such, shall not be considered a liability. A deficiency in such assets may be supplied by an increase in the amount of the licensed warehouseman's bond in accordance with paragraph 2 of section 2 of regulation 3.

On December 13, 1921, regulation 2, section 5 of the revised regulations of the Secretary of Agriculture, approved September 15, 1919, for cotton warehouses, was amended to read as follows:

The warehouseman conducting a warehouse licensed or for which application for license has been made under the act, shall have and maintain above all exemptions and liabilities unencumbered assets liable for the payment of any indebtedness arising from the conduct of the warehouse, to the extent of at least $5 per bale of its cotton storage capacity determined in accordance with paragraph 1 of section 2 of regulation 3, except that the amount of such assets shall not be less than $2,000, and need not be more than $100,000. In case such warehouseman has applied for licenses to conduct two or more warehouses in the same State, the assets applicable to all of which shall be subject to the liabilities of each, such warehouses shall be deemed to be one warehouse for the purposes of the assets required under this section, and such warehouseman shall have and maintain, above all exemptions and liabilities, unencumbered assets liable for the payment of any indebtedness arising from the conduct of any of such warehouses, to the extent of at least $5 per bale of their aggregate cotton storage capacity, determined in accordance with paragraph 1 of section 2 of regulation 3, except that the amount of such assets need not be more than $100,000. For the purposes of this section only, paid in capital stock, as such, shall not be considered a liability. A deficiency, not exceeding 50 per cent, in such net assets, may be supplied by an increase in the amount of the licensed warehouseman's bond in accordance with paragraph 2 of section 2 of regulation 3.

ADDITIONAL INSURANCE CREDIT.

Service and Regulatory Announcements No. 61 of the Bureau of Markets indicated certain credit allowed on insurance premiums charged on cotton stored in warehouses operated under the United States warehouse act. Through the efforts of the Department of Agriculture on December 1, 1921, the State Fire Insurance Commission of Texas issued a ruling increasing the credit from 10 to 15 per cent.

Service and Regulatory Announcements No. 61 of the Bureau of Markets indicated that the credit allowed by the various adjustment and underwriting associations applied only to the contents in storage in the warehouse. In July, 1921, the Department received word from various underwriting associations advising that the credit granted applied also to the insurance premiums charged on the buildings and their equipment.

BANKERS' OPINIONS OF THE UNITED STATES WAREHOUSE ACT.

As the prime purpose of the warehouse act is to develop and establish a form of warehouse receipt of the highest collateral value, bankers naturally are interested in the act and the accomplishments thereunder. In the past year there has been a more general recognition throughout the country on the part of bankers operating on a large scale of the merits of Federal warehouse receipts. A letter from the governor of the Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond, which reads in part as follows, contains a clear-cut statement of his opinion of a warehouse receipt issued under the Federal act:

We are very glad to give you our cooperation in the establishment of warehouses under the act. So far as we recall we have never had occasion to decline a loan based upon one of the United States bonded warehouse receipts, and if that occasion should arise, it would not be on account of the receipt.

From the senior vice-president of the National City Bank of New York, a letter, reading in part as follows, was received by a representative of the Department of Agriculture:

In so far as the acceptability of the United States licensed and bonded warehouse receipts for security purposes is concerned, there is no question in my mind but that they would not only be highly acceptable but also would be most desirable for that purpose. The requisites under the act for obtaining licenses for operating warehouses of this kind would put the acceptability of these receipts far above those of the unlicensed warehouses. Even the knowledge that the warehouses were subject to periodical examinations at irregular intervals without knowledge to the owners would of itself have a tendency to make these highly acceptable to banks.

The relative value for security purposes of the United States licensed and bonded warehouse receipts as against receipts issued by warehouses unlicensed under the act would be very high, because of the assurance that the holders would have, that the merchandise represented by the licensed receipt was subject to efficient examination and check by trained officials at irregular periods, which of course is not the case with unlicensed warehouses.

To the many indorsements received from bankers in different parts of the country, the governor of the Federal Reserve Board at Washington has added his indorsement in a letter which reads in part as follows:

I think it is recognized by banks and other financial institutions that warehouse receipts representing readily marketable nonperishable agricultural commodities properly warehoused are a desirable kind of security for bank loans. It is apparent, of course, that some warehouse receipts are more desirable than others, and that the degree of desirability is dependent upon a number of factors, included among which are the form and legal effect of the receipt, the question of whether or not the issuing warehouseman is licensed, bonded and operated under Federal law, or a State law furnishing proper safeguards, and is supervised and examined by competent officials with a view to the protection of the public, the reputation and financial responsibility of the warehousemen, the physical conditions affecting the warehouse, the question of insurance, etc.

Generally speaking, there can be no doubt, I think, that warehouse receipts issued by warehousemen licensed and bonded under the United States warehouse act will be considered by bankers as more desirable collateral security than those issued by warehousemen who are not licensed or bonded under any State or Federal law.

The United States warehouse act specifies in detail what shall be stated on each receipt issued under that act and these statements give very full information regarding the commodity which the receipt represents. The act also requires the warehousemen to keep records of all commodities stored or withdrawn and of all receipts issued and returned, and to make such reports to the Secretary of Agriculture as the Secretary shall require. The Secretary is given full authority to cause inspections and examinations to be made with a view to determining whether the warehousemen are complying with the conditions of the act and the regulations issued thereunder, and is also given authority, after a hearing has been afforded, to suspend or revoke the license of any warehousemen licensed under the act; and I understand that such inspections and examinations are actually being made at irregular intervals without notice to the warehousemen so as to reflect the normal conditions of the warehousemen's business. I understand also that before any license is issued the reputation and financial responsibility of the applicant is investigated, and the applicant's warehousing facilities are examined, and that no license is issued unless these are found to be satisfactory. Furthermore, the law requires that each applicant for a license must file a good and sufficient bond in the sum of not less than $5,000 nor more than $50,000, depending upon the capacity of the applicant's warehouse facilities, to secure the faithful performance of his obligations as a warehouseman, and that any person injured by the breach of any obligation to secure which the bond is given shall be entitled to sue on the bond for the damages he may have sustained on account of the breach.

All of these features are such as tend to make the warehouse receipts issued by warehousemen licensed and bonded under the United States warehouse act attractive to conservative bankers as collateral security for loans, and, as I have heretofore stated, except for such special conditions as may apply to particular cases, such warehouse receipts will undoubtedly be regarded more favorably by bankers than will receipts issued by warehousemen who are not licensed or bonded under any State or Federal law. I have no hesitation in saying, therefore, that in my judgment a campaign such as I understand is being conducted by the Department of Agriculture among warehousemen to educate them to the advantages of becoming licensed under the United States warehouse act and among bankers to educate them to the desirability as a form of collateral security of warehouse receipts issued by warehousemen so licensed, can be made to result in much benefit to the public through improved facilities both for the storing and marketing of agricultural products and for the proper financing of such storing and marketing.

The relative desirability of warehouse receipts issued by warehousemen licensed under the United States warehouse act and warehouse receipts issued by warehousemen licensed under the laws of particular States is a matter upon which I can not express an opinion, as I am not familiar with the various State laws or the administration thereof. It is my opinion, however, that there are certain advantages in being licensed under the Federal law, and in being subject to the supervision of the Federal authorities, which advantages would be most apparent in cases where the holders of warehouse receipts desire to use them as collateral for loans from banks located in States other than that in which the warehouse happens to be located.

The merits of warehouse receipts issued under the Federal warehouse act, for financing purposes, are attested by a statement of one of the officials of the War Finance Corporation, who has stated that to the best of his knowledge, the corporation has never had occasion to deny an application for a loan for which Federal warehouse receipts were given as security. The opinion of the directors of the War Finance Corporation of warehouse receipts issued under the Federal act is clearly stated in the following letter received from the managing director of the corporation:

I wish to take this opportunity to thank you for the valuable services which your bureau has rendered to the War Finance Corporation in connection with loans made by the War Finance Corporation to cooperative marketing associations throughout the United States.

These loans have been made as you know on the security of warehouse receipts representing the commodity to be marketed, and it has been of prime importance that such commodities be properly warehoused. In a large majority of cases cooperative associations obtaining advances from us have given as security receipts issued by Federally licensed warehouses, licensed and supervised by your bureau. The fact that a warehouse is so licensed and supervised has given us added feeling of security and an assurance that our interest in the security was being properly cared for, and the integrity of the warehouse receipt respected.

From my experience in the work of the War Finance Corporation, I believe that the safeguards imposed under the licensing system of your bureau add greatly to the value of a warehouse receipt as security and work to the advantage of the person or institution which lends money on warehouse receipt security, of the owner of the commodities, and of the warehouse which assumes responsibility for the receipt.

We have found the form of warehouse receipt required by your bureau especially valuable in connection with our loans. In connection with our cotton loans, for instance, the warehouse receipt issued by Federally licensed warehouses certifies on its face not only the number of bales, but the weight, grade and staple of the cotton. Such certification adds greatly to the value of the receipt as collateral.

Very truly yours,

(Signed)

EUGENE MEYER, Jr.,

Managing Director.

That bankers regard a warehouse receipt issued under the Federal act as one possessing greater collateral value than one issued by the same warehouse when not operated under the act is shown from the following extract from a letter received by the Department from a holder of a number of cotton warehouse receipts:

While in New Orleans sometime back I negotiated a loan through one of the banks there, giving as security warehouse receipts for cotton. Among the list of receipts were a few that were not bonded receipts and very much to my surprise the bank threw those receipts back on me and refused to accept them as collateral, but raised no objection to the bonded receipts at all as our warehouse here had been placed on the approved list of the Federal Reserve Bank.

The receipts mentioned in the above quotation on which the bank refused to make a loan were receipts issued by the same warehouse prior to the date on which it became licensed under the United States warehouse act.

OPINIONS OF LICENSED WAREHOUSEMEN.

Sometimes the question is asked why certain warehouses are not licensed under the act, and various reasons are given by the owners of such warehouses. Some reasons advanced are a fear of Government red tape and too much cost incident to licensing. Generally speaking, those who have operated their warehouses under the act in full conformity with it, and the regulations, have found that these objections are not valid. One warehouseman who has been licensed for some time wrote the Department on January 30, 1922, as follows:

I think that the Federal warehouse act is one of the best things that has been put in operation in this country, so far as the handling of our cotton is concerned. Through it we not only have a uniform warehouse receipt as to the weight, condition, grade and staple of every bale of cotton, making it possible for the cotton to be used as security for funds advanced to assist in marketing the crop without danger of loss to the lender, but it gives a lower rate of insurance.

Another warehouseman who has been licensed for several years wrote the Department on July 5, 1921, as follows:

Recently some of our directors were discussing the benefits we have derived in several ways since joining the Federal warehouse system and I am taking this opportunity to pass same on to you, knowing that you will be interested in what we think of the system. As you remember we were operating as an independent warehouse insuring all cotton through local insurance agencies in standard companies at standard rates. We decided to join the Federal system and found that we were required to carry the same amount of bond as required before by the Federal Reserve Bank but would receive a reduction of 25 per cent in our insurance rate. Our saving on this item alone has been $900 for the year. We are very much pleased with the manner in which inspections are made, and we find your suggestions very helpful. I might add that the local banks are carrying loans amounting to thousands of dollars on our warehouse receipts.

Another warehouseman who has been operating as a licensed warehouseman for several years on July 2, 1921, wrote the Department as follows:

We have found that there is less red tape in being connected with the Bureau of Markets in the way of operating a Federal warehouse than there is in anything else connected with Government supervision. * * * The inspection service maintained by the Bureau of Markets is very complete as the inspectors are all high-grade men who know their business. Cotton, insurance, books and condition of warehouse are inspected regularly and reports made to the Department in Washington. Bankers in this section express their preference very strongly as to warehouse receipts of Federal warehouses.

After conducting our plant under Federal supervision for two seasons we can strongly recommend the system. In our opinion it is the only system that gives adequate protection to storer, banker and stockholder of any warehouse company.

We handle all the cotton bought on this market and lots of cotton bought in the Delta for one of the largest staple buyers in this section. Our weights, etc., are accepted by the mills and this buyer refused to handle his cotton through any other channel. The confidence of the people is built up and held by Federal supervision and is the keynote of success in handling cotton.
